3. Not meddled with.
We must pursue the sylvan lands;
Th' abode of nymphs, untravell'd by former hands. Dryden.
Several very ancient trees grow upon the spot, from whence they conclude, that these particular tracts must have lain un-touch'd for some ages. Addison.
- UNTO'WARD. adj.
1. Froward; perverse; vexatious; not easily guided, or taught.
Have to my window; and if she be froward,
Then halt thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. Shakespeare.
The ladies prove averse,
And more untoward to be won,
Than by Caligula the moon. Hudibras.
The rabbins write, when any Jew
Did make to God or man a vow,
Which afterwards he found untoward,
Or stubborn to be kept, or too hard;
Any three other Jews o' th' nation,
Might free him from the obligation. Hudibras.
They were a cross, odd, untoward people.
Some men have made a very untoward use of this, and such as he never intended they should. Woodward.
2. Aukward; ungracul.
Vast is my theme, yet unconceiv'd, and brings Untoward words, scarce loos'n'd from the things. Crech.
Some clergymen hold down their heads within an inch of the cushion; which, besides the untoward manner, hinders them from making the best advantage of their voice. Swift.
- UNTO'WARDLY. adj. Aukwardly; perverse; froward.
They learn, from unbred or debauched servants, untowardly tricks and vices. Locke on Education.
- UNTO'WARDLY. adv. Aukwardly; ungainly; perversely.
He that provides for this short life, but takes no care for eternity, acts as untowardly and as crossly to the reason of things, as can be. Tillotson.
- He explained them very untowardly. Tillotson.

I forc'd to ride th' untractable abyss. Milton.
- UNTRACTABLENESS. n. f. Unwillingness, or unfitness to be regulated or managed; stubbornness.
The great difference in mens intellectuals arises from a defect in the organs of the body, particularly adapted to think; or in the dulness or untractableness of those faculties, for want of use. Locke.
- UNTRA'DING. adj. Not engaged in commerce.
Men leave estates to their children in land, as not so liable to casualties as money, in untrading and unskillful hands. Locke.
- UNTRAIN'ED. adj.
1. Not educated; not instructed; not disciplined.
My wit untrain'd in any kind of art. Shakespeare.
The king's forces charged lively, and they again as stoutly received the charge; but being an untrained multitude, without any soldier or guide, they were soon put to flight. Hynde.
- Life.
To noble and ignoble, is more sweet
Untrain'd in arms, where rustiness leads not on. Milton.
No expert general will bring a company of raw, untrained men into the field; but will, by little bloodless skirmishes, instruct them in the manner of the fight. Decay of Piety.
2. Irregular; ungovernable.
Gad not abroad at ev'ry quest and call
Of an untrained hope or passion:
To court each place of fortune that doth fall,
Is wantonness in contemplation. Herbert.
- UNTRANSFERABLE. adj. Incapable of being given from one to another.
In parliament there is a rare co-ordination of power,
though the sovereignty remain still entire and untransferable, in the prince. Howel's Pre-eminence of Parliament.
- UNTRANSPARENT. adj. Not diaphanous; opaque.
Though held against the light they appear'd of a transparent yellow, yet looked on with one's back turn'd to the light, they exhibited an untransparent blue. Boyle on Colours.

- UNTRA'VELLED. adj.
1. Never trodden by passengers.
We find no open track, or constant manuduction in this labyrinth, but are oft times fain to wander in America, and untravell'd parts. Brown's Pref. to Vulgar Errors.
- Long untravell'd heaths. Thompson.
2. Having never been foreign countries.
An untravell'd Englishman cannot relish all the beauties of Italian pictures; because the postures exprest in them are often such as are peculiar to that country. Addison.
- TO UNTRE'AD. v. a. To tread back; to go back in the same steps.
We will untread the steps of damned flight,
And, like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankness and irregular course,
Stoop low within those bounds we have o'erlook'd. Shakespeare.
- UNTRU'ASURED. adj. Not laid up; not repositied.
Her attendants
Saw her a-bed, and in the morning early
They found the bed untrusur'd of their mistress. Shakespeare.

Men are of so untratable a temper, that nothing can be obtained of them. Decay of Piety.
- UNTRU'ED. adj.
1. Not yet attempted.
It behoves,
From hard essays, and ill success pass,
A faithful leader, not to hazard all Through ways of danger, by himself untry'd. Milton.
That she no ways nor means may leave untry'd,
Thus to her sister the herself apply'd. Denham.
2. Not yet experienced.
Never more
Mean I to try, what rash untry'd I fought,
The pain of absence from thy sight. Milton's Par. Lost.
The happiest of mankind overlooking those solid blessings which they already have, set their hearts upon somewhat which they want; some untry'd pleasure, which, if they could but taste, they should then be completely blest. Atterbury.
- Self-preservation, the long acquaintance of soul and body, the untry'd condition of a separation, are sufficient reasons not to turn our backs upon life, out of an humour. Collier.
Eternity! thou pleasing, dreadful thought!
Through what variety of untry'd being,
Through what new scenes and changes must we pass! Addison.
3. Not having pass'd trial.
The father secure,
Ventures his filial virtue, though untry'd,
Against what'er may tempt. Milton's Par. Regain'd.
- UNTRIUMPHABLE. adj. Which allows no triumph.
What towns, what garisons might you,
With hazard of this blood subdue;
Which now y're bent to throw away
In vain, untriumphable fray? Hudibras.
- UNTRO'D. adj. Not pass'd; not marked by the foot.
UNTRODDEN. adj.
The way he came, not having mark'd's return
Was difficult, by human steps untr'd. Paradise Regain'd.
Now while the heav'n by the sun's team untr'd,
Hath took no print of the approaching light,
And all the pangled host keep watch,
A garland made of such new bays,
As no man's temples e'er did crown. Waller.
Who was the first to explore th' untradden path,
When life was hazard'd in ev'ry step? Addison's Cato.
- UNTRO'LL'D. adj. Not bowled; not rolled along.
Hard fate! unroll'd is now the channing eye;
The playhouse and the parks unroll'd must lie. Dryden.
- UNTRO'UBLED. adj.
1. Not disturbed by care, sorrow, or guilt.
Quiet untroubled soul, awake! awake!
Arm, fight and conquer, for fair England's sake. Shakespeare.
2. Not agitated; not confused.
Our Saviour meek, and with untroubled mind,
After his airy jaunts, though hurry'd forey,
Hungry and cold, betook him to his rest. Milton.
3. Not interrupted in the natural course.
Would they think with how small allowance
Untroubled nature doth herself suffice,
Such superfluities they would despise. Fairy Queen.
4. Transparent; clear.
The equal distribution of the spirits in the liquor with the tangible parts, ever representeth bodies clear and untroubled. Bacon.
- UNTRU'E. adj.
1. False; contrary to reality.
By what construction shall any man make those comparisons true, holding that distinction untrus. Hooker.
That a vessel filled with ashes, will receive the like quantity of water, that it would have done if it had been empty, is utterly untrus, for the water will not go in by a fifth part. Bacon.

UNT

2. False; not faithful.
I cannot break fo sweet a bond,
Unless I prove untrus;
Nor can I ever be so fond,
To prove untrue for you. Suckling.
- Flora commands those nymphs and knights,
Who liv'd in flow'ry ease, and loose delights:
Who never acts of honour durst pursue,
The men inglorious knights, the ladies all untrue. Dryden.
- UNTRU'EX. adv. Falsely; not according to truth.
It was their hurt untruly to attribute so great power unto false gods. Hooker, b. v.
On these mountains it is generally received that the ark rested, but untruly. Raleigh's Hist. of the World.
- UNTRU'STINESS. n. f. Unfaithfulness.
Secretary Peter, under pretence of gravity, covered much untrusiness of heart. Hayward.
- UNTRU'TH. n. f.
1. Falshood; contrariety to reality.
2. Moral falshood; not veracity.
He who is perfect, and abhors untruth,
With heavenly influence inspires my youth. Sandys.
3. Treachery; want of fidelity.
I would,
So my untrath had not provok'd him to it,
The king had cut off my head with my brother's. Shakespeare.
4. False assertion.
In matter of speculation or practice, no untrath can possibly avail the patron and defender long; and things most truly, are likewise most benevolently spoken. Hooker, b. iii.
- There is little hope for common justice in this dispute, from a man, who lays the foundations of his reasonings in so notorious an untrath. Atterbury.
- UNTRU'ABLE. adj. Unharmonious; not musical.
My news in dumb silence will I bury,
For they are harsh, untruable, and bad. Shakespeare.
A lute-string, merely unequal in its parts, giveth a harsh and untruable sound; which strings we call false. Bacon.
His harsh untruable pipe is no more fit than a raven's, to join with the music of a choir. Taylor, N° 54.
- TO UNTUNE. v. a.
1. To make incapable of harmony.
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And hark what discord follows. Shakespeare.
When the last and dreadful hour,
This crumbling pageant shall devour,
The trumpet shall be heard on high,
The dead shall live, the living die,
And music shall untune the sky. Dryden.
- The captives, as their tyrant shall require,
That they should breathe the song, and touch the lyre,
Shall say; can Jacob's servile race rejoice,
Untrun'd the music, and disun'd the voice? Prior.
2. To disorder.
O you kind gods!
Cure this great breach in his abused nature;
Th' untuned and jarring senses, O wind up
Of this child-changed father. Shakespeare, K. Lear.
- UNTURN'D. adj. Not turned.
New crimes invented, left unturnd no stone,
To make my guilt appear, and hide his own. Dryden.
So eager hath the inquisitive part of mankind been to bring this matter to a fair issue, that no stone hath been left unturnd, no way, whereby these things could have been brought forth of the sea, but one or other hath pitch'd upon. Woodward.
- UNTO'FORED. adj. Uninstructed; untaught.
Thy mother took into her blameful bed
Some stern wintur'd churl; and noble flock
Was graft with crab-tree slip, whose fruit thou art. Shakespeare.
Thy even thoughts with so much plainness flow,
Their sense untur'd infancy may know:
Yet to such height is all that plainness wrought,
Wit may admire, and letter'd pride be taught. Prior.
- TO UNTWINE. v. a.
1. To open what is held together by convolution.
But since the filers did so soon untwine
So fair a thread, I'll strive to piece the line. Waller.
2. To open what is wrapped or enfolded.
It turns finely and softly three or four turns, caused by the unwinding of the beard by the moisture. Bacon.
3. To separate that which clasps round any thing.
Divers worthy gentlemen of England, all the Syren songs of Italy could never untwine from the mast of God's word. Ajaban.
- TO UNTWIST. v. a. To separate any things involved in each other, or wrapped up on themselves.
Untwisting his deceitful clew,
He 'gan to weave a web of wicked guile. Fairy Queen.
The interest of prince and people is so enfolded in a mutual embrace, that they cannot be untwisted without pulling a limb off. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

UNV

- Untwisting all the chains that tie
The hidden soul of harmony. Milton.
No, I'll untwist you;
I have occasion for your stay on earth. Dryden.
Tarted hempen ropes cut small and untwisted, are beneficial for lands. Mortimer's Husbandry.
- Untwist a wire, and from her gums
A set of teeth completely comes. Swift.
- TO UNTY. v. a. [See UNTIE.] To loose.
O time! thou must untangle this, not I:
It is too hard a knot for me t' untie. Shakespeare.
- TO UNVA'IL. v. a. To uncover; to strip of a veil. This word is unvail, or unveil, according to its etymology. See VAIL, and VEIL.
Troy reviv'd, her mourning face unvail'd. Denham.
Now unvail'd, the toilet stands display'd,
Each silver vase in my tick order laid. Pope.
- UNVA'ICABLE. adj. Inestimable; being above price.
Secure the innocence of children, by imparting to them the unvaluable blessing of a virtuous and pious education. Atterb.
- UNVA'LUED. adj.
1. Not prized; neglected.
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state. Shakespeare.
2. Inestimable; above price.
I thought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
Inestimable stones, unval'd jewels. Shakespeare.
- UNVA'QUISHED. Not conquered; not overcome.
Shall I for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be called but viceroy of the whole? Shakespeare.
Victory doth more often fall by error of the unvanquish'd, than by the valour of the victorious. Hayward.
- They rise unvanquish'd. Milton's Par. Lost, b. vi.
- UNVA'RABLE. adj. [invariable, Fr.] Not changeable; not mut-able.
The two great hinges of morality stand fixt and unvariable as the two poles: whatever is naturally conducive to the common interest, is good; and whatever has a contrary influence, is evil. Norris.
- UNVA'RIED. adj. Not changed; not diversified.
If authors cannot be prevailed with to keep close to truth and instruction, by unvaried terms, and plain, unphilosophical arguments; yet it concerns readers not to be imposed on. Locke.
They ring round the same unvaried chimes,
With sure returns of still-expected rhymes. Pope.
- UNVA'RISHED. adj.
1. Not overlaid with varnish.
2. Not adorned; not decorated.
I will a round, unvarnish'd tale deliver,
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms
I won his daughter with. Shakespeare, Othello.
- UNVARYING. adj. Not liable to change.
We cannot keep by us any standing, unvarying measure of duration, which consists in a constant fleeting succession, as we can of certain lengths of extension, as inches marked out in permanent parcels of matter. Locke.
- TO UNVE'IL. v. a. [See VEIL and VAIL.]
1. To uncover; to divest of a veil.
The moon,
Apparent queen, unveil'd her peerless light. Milton.
To the limpid stream direct thy way,
When the gay morn unveils her smiling ray. Pope.
2. To disclose; to show.
The providence, that's in a watchful state,
Knows almost every grain of Pluto's gold;
Does ev'n our thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles. Shak.
- UNVE'ILEDLY. adv. Plainly, without disguise.
Not knowing what use you will make of what has been unveiledly communicated to you, I was unwilling that some things, which had cost me pains, should fall into any man's hands, that co'ern to purchase knowledge with pains. Boyle.
- UNVENTILATED. adj. Not fanned by the wind.
This animals, to succour life, demand;
Nor should the air unventilated stand;
The idle deep corrupted would contain Blue deaths. Blackmore's Creation.
- UNVE'RITABLE. adj. Not true.
All these proceeded upon unveritable grounds. Brown.
- UNVERSED. adj. Unacquainted; unskilled.
Not eastern monarchs, on their nuptial days,
In dazzling gold and purple shine so gay,
As the bright natives of th' unlabour'd field,
Unvers'd in spinning, and in looms unskill'd. Blackmore.
- UNVEX'D. adj. Untroubled; undisturbed.
With a blest and unvex'd retire,
With unhack'd swords, and helmets all unbruise'd,
We will bear home that lusty blood again. Shakespeare.
Unvex'd with thought of wants which may betide;
Or for to-morrow's dinner to provide. Dryden's Juvenal.
